

As part of QMII's growing network of professionals committed to building meaningful, resilient management systems, we bring you this latest edition of the QMII Globe. In this newsletter, we're bringing you practical insights to help you and your teams stay ahead of common audit challenges and introduce a new nuclear quality standard.

In over 38 years of supporting clients across diverse industries, QMII has always encouraged the integrated management systems approach. In "Integrating Standards for Safe Nuclear Expansion," Dr. IJ Arora emphasizes the critical need for organizations to proactively integrate ISO standards to ensure safety, sustainability, and risk management as nuclear energy development accelerates.

In "Types of Challenging Auditees - and How to Engage Them Effectively," we explore a common challenge in ISO audits—engaging difficult auditees—and show how doing so effectively can offer valuable insight into how risk-based thinking is applied (or overlooked) throughout an organization.

From the archives, we're bringing back "How Not to Prepare for an Audit," a timely reminder that passing an audit isn't the goal, being prepared is.

Plus, don't miss our upcoming training opportunities designed specifically to support professionals like you—committed, experienced, and focused on continual improvement.

We're glad to be part of your ongoing journey to nurture excellence.

Integrating Standards For Safe Nuclear Expansion

By Dr. IJ Arora

As nuclear energy regains attention as a low-carbon solution, organizations developing these energy sources need to consider a systems approach to the safe launch and growth of facilities. Once considered a great alternative to gasoline and coal, the nuclear energy industry's growth was negatively affected by incidents like those at Chernobyl and Three Mile Island.

Highlight: ISM & ISPS Hybrid Training in Action

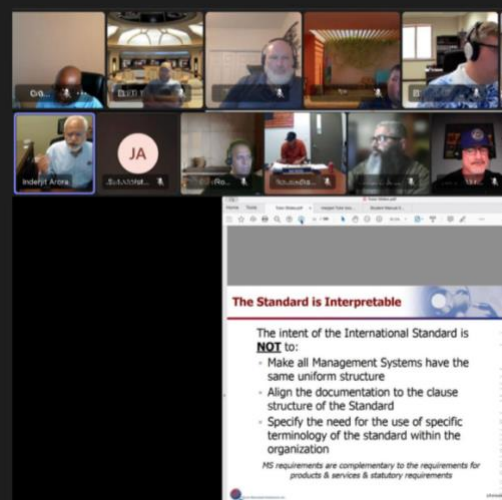

We're always inspired by professionals who share our commitment to maritime safety—and our recent hybrid format ISM and ISPS courses were a shining example of that spirit.

To everyone who participated—thank you! We're honored to be part of your journey and look forward to supporting your continued growth in the industry.

Few partnerships are as rewarding as collaborating with the U.S. Coast Guard.

In this session, we were honored to support their efforts in strengthening Mission Management Systems and reinforcing industry best practices.

Another successful AS9110 Rev C Lead Auditor training complete.

This training was led by Subject Matter Expert (SME), Dr. Inderjit Arora, in a online format. Congratulations to the Army trainees for completion of the course!

Have we helped you?

If so, we would love to hear your feedback!
